

Cunningsburgh History Group

Monday 7th December was a significant day for the folk in Cunningsburgh. After several years spent fundraising the Cunningsburgh History Group were delighted to accept delivery of their purpose built portacabin, now situated next to the Public Hall.

The new building means that the group will be able to meet more regularly and informally. It will also be used for the storage of photographs, equipment, maps and small artefacts relating to the history of the local area.

When the building opens to the public there will be opportunities for the community to come along and use the broadband facilities for research and communication. The group are in the process of setting up a website www.cunningsburghheritage.com and they are hoping that folk will contribute articles to this.

It will take a few months to furnish the interior but there will be a formal opening before the Hamefarin in June when everybody will be welcome to come and visit.
